

Kate Margolis is a litigator in Bradley's Jackson, Mississippi office with 20+ years' experience representing clients around the U.S. from pre-suit investigation through trial and appeal. Her practice is focused primarily on insureds' disputes with insurance carriers who delay or deny claims for insurance payments, defense and indemnity, and other benefits. Kate helps prevent insurance disputes in the first place by identifying coverage gaps and ambiguities in a client's insurance policy portfolio and writes about rapidly changing insurance issues such as coverage for ransomware attacks and other cyber risks. Kate regularly serves as pro bono counsel, including representation of Mississippi's only female death row inmate in federal habeas proceedings. She received her B.A. in Communication from Mississippi College and J.D. from the University of Mississippi, where she served one year as a full-time Visiting Professor of Law. Immediately after law school, she served as a law clerk to the Honorable Rhesa H. Barksdale on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. She is a fellow of the American Bar Foundation and recent recipient of the Outstanding Service Award from her local bar association for her work as editor of the association's newsletter.
